The timely discovery of a fire in a main street vulcanizing shop at 1 o'clock Thursday morning probably prevented a blaze of considerable proportions, as the shop is located in a frame building, one of the similar structure that stand in a row. Eitelman, a tailor, was asleep in the rear of his shop, which is next that of the vulcanizer, when he was awakened by the stifling effect of smoke. there was but little blaze there was considerable smoke. The fire was extinguished without the aid of the fire department.

Leslie Spencer, now of Hartford, misjudged speed and distance while driving his automobile in Elm street towards Watch Hill Wednesday evening and as a result three automobiles were damaged, but no person was injured. Parked close to the curb in Elm street, on the right side and headed toward Watch Hill, were the automobiles of Sidney Ailing and Francis Ahern. As the Spencer car neared this point another car approached, coming from Watch Hill, well to the right of the road and holding the right of way. Mr. Spencer attempted to drive between the two standing cars and the approach of the car, but there was not sufficient room. In order to avoid a head-on collision he veered more to the right. His machine struck the Ailing car, threw it on to the sidewalk, smashed a forward wheel and broke a spring. Then the Spencer car struck the Ahern car from the rear, smashing a fender, the gasoline tank and doing other damage. The Spencer car was also considerably damaged. Mr. Spencer acknowledged that he was wholly to blame, that he misjudged, and stated that he would settle for the damage.
